Course Overview

Application Development System (ADS) is a tool that is used to expedite the writing and testing of modular applications. With ADS, you can develop online and batch applications.

Activities such as flow-of-control processing, data storage definition, data verification, editing, and error handling are specified through a series of screens instead of conventional detailed code.

This course covers the IDMS Data Dictionary as it pertains to the ADS/Online language.

In This Course, You Will Learn How To:

- Invoke the IDD compiler to:
  - Create data elements
  - Create record definitions
  - Create Dialog process modules
- Use IDD to query the Data Dictionary
- Use the IDD Menu Facility
